Metropolitan State University Gordon Parks Gallery presents Reconciliations. This exhibit features the sculptural work of Tracy Krumm of Saint Paul. Describing her work, Krumm said, “For over a decade, I have been engaged with an ongoing body of work that investigates relationships between labor, gender, duality, time and culture. My personal connections to place and community—connections that constantly develop, shift and are often transient and fleeting—inform the results. I embrace traditionally “domestic” and gender-specific techniques in my creative practice, including crochet and blacksmithing. As working processes, these universal means of cultural production bear the mark of history and connect me to generations of makers.”

The gallery is located in the Library and Learning Center, 645 East 7th Street, at Metropolitan State University's Saint Paul Campus.

Regarding the exhibition, Erica Rasmussen, gallery director, said, “Krumm’s latest sculptural works may be her most compelling works yet. Beyond her impeccable craftsmanship, her artwork speaks of complimentary forces and elements; masculinity and femininity, industrial and domestic, flexibility and fragility, and familiarity and foreignness. Her new works, incorporating manipulated metals and hand-blown glass, are powerful and poetic.”
